Introduction

Biographical Information

Samuel J. Entrikin was born September 26, 1862 to Thomas and Sarah Jane Cloud Entrikin in Juniata County, Pennsylvania. When his mother died around 1865, a young Entrikin was sent to live with Sarah Entrikin—his aunt and notable West Chester physician. Schooled in West Chester, Samuel was a printer by trade, yet he pursued many other interests—among them, teaching, mining, farming, and inventing. However, Entrikin is best known as one of West Chester’s famous Artic explorers.

As a young man, Samuel began his career under Philadelphia area printers F. Sharpless Hickman (ca. 1879-85) and Thomas S. Dando (1885-86). After six years, he abandoned the trade to take up teaching in Aiken South Carolina at the Schofield Normal Industrial School for “colored people”.

By the fall of 1891, Entrikin had moved to pursue a Science and Engineering education at Swarthmore College. After studying for just a year, Entrikin then joined the Peary relief expedition of 1892 and ventured to the Artic.

In the coming years, Entrikin traveled to the Artic twice more—first, as second in command of the Peary Northern Greenland expedition (1893-94) and later as a member of a government-appointed party assigned to measure the height of Mt. St. Elias and other mountain peaks of Alaska (1896-97).

On returning from Mt. St. Elias, Entrikin came across the small Alaskan towns of Dyea and Skaguay, from which originated the famous Dyea and White Pass Trails, respectively. Curious to learn these routes, which led to the Yukon gold fields, Entrikin, with the aid of native Hingit packers, trekked both. For the next four years, Entrikin spent his days between the Alaskan gold country and the western United States coast, namely Seattle and San Francisco, working for the Philadelphia Exploring and Mining Company and the US government. As he was quite unsuccessful in his personal pursuit of gold, Entrikin earned his living as the captain of a steamship that ferried other prospectors. During this period, he married his first wife, San Franciscan Estelle Baker---from whom he separated soon for reasons unknown.

In 1901, Entrikin returned to the Schofield school in South Carolina, only to resign in 1904 when he accepted a superintendent position at the Arizona Consolidated [copper] Mining Company, near the Mexican border. In 1908, he married widow Sara Scott Buffington and the couple resided in Johnson, Cochise County, Arizona.

Entrikin returned to the Schofield school for a short year in 1910, citing that the Arizona climate was proving detrimental to his health. For similar reasons, the Entrikins left South Carolina for the last time and returned to Samuel’s boyhood home, Chester County, PA where they purchased the old Franklin Miller farm near Pughtown. The Entrikins farmed in Pennsylvania until Samuel procured a management position on a Florida farm. They moved to Narcossee, Florida in 1914 and there they lived out their remaining days.

After intermittently suffering for some thirty years from mental illness (it is unclear exactly how severe her illness was, although at times, she was admitted to an institution), Sara Entrikin passed away of pneumonia in February 1940. Just a little over two years later, Samuel followed, having suffered from stroke-related complications.

Some would classify “Sam” Entrikin as “among the famous and noted residents of West Chester.”¹ Well known to all of Chester County, Samuel J. Entrikin led a well-rounded life. In addition to being a celebrated Artic explorer, he was a printer, teacher, gold miner, farmer, inventor, and devoted husband.²

Every effort was made to preserve the original order in which the photos were arranged. However, with the exception of Entrikin's photo albums, which were already assembled according to category, the files were essentially arranged chronologically to reflect the major periods in Entrikin's life. The researcher may find it useful to reference the general timeline of Entrikin's life, found on page 2 of this guide.

Most photos were captioned by Mr. Entrikin and are listed as such. Original captions are distinguishable by capitalization.

Series Descriptions

Files 1-10, 12-16, album/files 32-33, and file 38 document Entrikin's Arctic experiences: the Peary relief expedition (1892), the Northern Greenland expedition (1893-94), and the Mt. St. Elias expedition (1896-97). The subjects covered include arctic nature, ships, crews and camps, and native Eskimo peoples. The files would be of particular interest to those interested in nineteenth century arctic exploration.

File 11 consists of two photos taken during Entrikin's stay in Aiken, SC when he was a teacher/superintendent of the Schofield Normal and Industrial School for African Americans.

Entrikin's photos from Seattle, WA and Alaska while he was working during the gold rush (1897-1901) are located in files 17-21 and album/files 34-35.

There is a small file covering R.E. Peary's disputed 1909 discovery of the North Pole and also some of the members of the expedition, most notably African American explorer, Matthew Henson. Entrikin did not participate in the adventure and it appears that either Dr. Frederick A. Cook or expedition member Donald MacMillan took the photos.

File 23 and album/files 35-37 depict Entrikin's years in the Southwest as a copper miner (1904-10). There are photos of Mexico, Texas, and Arizona—most notably those of Mr. and Mrs. Entrikin and their homes and, of historical significance, the Yaqui Indian surrender.

File 24 consists of personal pictures of the Entrikin's later years, which they spent in Narcossee Florida. This small file depicts Samuel, Sara, and friends.

The remaining files (25-31) are of a more general nature and may be most useful for genealogists or local historians. They cover Samuel and Sara Entrikin, their homes, pets, families, and their acquaintances, as well as miscellaneous subjects.
